Cartwright, the pension specialist for defined benefit and hybrid schemes, today announced it had further enhanced its development team with the appointment of Carl Rodrigues as Growth Manager.

Robin Pearce, Operations Director at Cartwright, commented: "At the end of 2024 we announced a whole company rebrand and the launch of several new service lines including Charitable Trusts, Corporate Treasury and Funeral Trusts, that sit alongside and complement our established pensions and employee benefit functions. Carl will play a key role in driving business development across these exciting new areas. We've already seen a remarkable surge of interest - not just from new clients, but also our existing client base who are keen to explore how these expanded services can further support their needs. It's an exciting chapter for our firm, and Carl's expertise will be instrumental in fuelling our growth throughout 2025."

Carl Rodrigues, Growth Manager at Cartwright, said: "Cartwright's independence and pioneering spirit has allowed its evolution to follow an impressive path – weaving the traditional with the innovative – as we have recently seen with Bitcoin. This means they are able to bring genuinely ground breaking strategies to the clients they work with - securing the best outcomes for them specifically. It's exciting to be part of a firm that is so clearly focused on creative advancement and I'm looking forward to our next phase of growth, supporting our clients to thrive."

Carl brings over 30 years' experience in sales and strategy, focused on scaling early-stage tech startups in data, AI, fintech, and Bitcoin. He spent a decade at the Open Data Institute, and in recent years he has worked with actuarial and insurance professionals on data and AI related learning.
